SAYS

COMMUNITY FAMILIARITY BREEDS CIVIC CONTEMPT

A lady wrote me a letter recently in which she asked, "What do you mean when you say one of the monkey wrenches in community machinery is 'contemptuous familiarity'?" I understand, she continued, "what you mean by 'monkey wrenches,' but I don't get this 'contemptuous familiarity.'"

"Contemptuous familiarity" is the opposite of "wide-awakefulness." It is the blindfold that keeps you from seeing, the ear-muff, that keeps you from hearing opportunity that is to the right, to the left, above and below you, right in Bethel.

Whenever the civic clubs of your community perform a task for the good of all, it causes you to say, "Well, they are supposed to do it, therefore they deserve no thanks for it."

And when your newspaper takes up an issue vital to your welfare and the welfare of your neighbors you are moved to say, "He is paid to do it—he has an axe to grind."

When local business men say, "All we ask is a chance to serve you," it causes you to say, "Why should we do them any favors; what have they ever done for us?"

It is that which puts the idea in your head that there is nothing for you in Bethel, and to be something or to do something you have to go elsewhere; that which causes you to feel that Bethel is not big enough for you, when the truth of the matter is that Bethel is just as big as you make it.

To be "contemptuously familiar" keeps you down, belittles you and belittles Bethel, and causes all wide-awake people who know of you, and with whom you come in contact, to feel sorry for and pity you. "Contemptuous familiarity" is worse than a monkey wrench in the machinery—it is a disease, playing havoc with communities everywhere.

You know the story of the man who moved away because it was such a nuisance to pick up the stones full of little black lumps that littered his field and hindered his plowing each spring. Today that field is the largest diamond mine in the world. Also the man who sold his farm because there was so much oil seeping on the creek the stock could not drink—today one of the country's finest oil fields. Both of these men were infected with "contemptuous familiarity."

For years a pretty little stream of clear, pure water trickled from the side of a rock-walled hillside, within four blocks of the center of a community of some 5,000 people. Hundreds of local citizens saw it every day, many passing it by, some stopping to drink of it. A stranger came one day, saw and drank, but he did not pass. He is a millionaire today, through the sale of that water in bottles.

Several hundred acres of swamp land overgrown with "worthless" willows were joyfully unloaded by local people onto a "snicker" who now is worth his weight in gold, through resale of the selfsame timber to a reed furniture manufacturer.

Look around you. See, hear and recognize the advantages of Bethel. They are there if you will but take advantage of them.

CHURCH ACTIVITIES

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
L. A. Edwards, Pastor
9:30 Church School, Miss Ida Packard Superintendent.

10:45 Morning Worship. Subject of pastor's address, "A Call to Sanity." If the world is ever again plunged into war whose fault will it be? Who was really responsible for the last great war?

Can we continue as Christians to offer the prayer "Thy Kingdom Come," and prepare to slaughter our fellow men?

How many of our ex-soldiers of the World War would vote to settle international difficulties by war?

Do you know what proportion of your taxes go to pay for wars of the past and preparation for future wars?

On Sunday evening the Comrades of the Way will meet at the Church at 7:15 sharp, and leave immediately for Gorham, N. H., where the regular meeting of the Chapter will be held in the Congregational Church. Subject to be discussed will be "What Should Be the Attitude of Youth toward War?"

BETHEL METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. W. R. Patterson, Pastor
Church School meets Sunday morning 9:15.

Preaching Service 10:45. Our topic for last Sunday was: "A Revival Plan." The question naturally arises: Is a revival necessary to the best interests of the church and community? We shall, therefore, next Sunday stress the "Need of a Revival," even in this moving, throbbing, bustling and advancing age. What's the difference between a dead battery and the one charged with life? What was the trouble with the church in Sardis (Rev. 3:1)?

Are there any churches like Sardis today?

Epworth League Sunday evening 6:30. Regular evening service 7:30.

Class Meeting Tuesday evening 7:30. The Epworth League will give a Penny Social in the vestry of the Methodist Church next Friday night, Nov. 8, at 6:30 o'clock. The admission is one cent. Supper will be served in a "help yourself" manner with each item on the bill of fare one penny. The same price is attached to other attractions which will occur during the evening. So come next Friday night with your pockets full of pennies and you'll be sure of a good time.

Eat Everything without Fear of Indigestion

Are there lots of foods you can't eat—for fear of gas, bloating, pains in the stomach and bowels?

Do you have to pass up favorite dishes—while the rest enjoy them?

That's a sign you need Tanlac! For more than 10 years Tanlac has restored to vigorous health thousands who denied themselves their favorite foods just as you have to.

Mr. V. R. Morgan, of 85 Front St., Old Town, Me., says: "I suffered so from indigestion that I had to quit looking after my lumber business. Now I can eat and sleep, and am full of energy."

If you suffer from indigestion, gas, dizziness, headaches, constipation or torpid liver—give Tanlac a chance to help you! The first bottle often brings the needed relief.

Tanlac is a good, pure medicine, made of roots, barks, and herbs that are recognized by the United States Pharmacopoeia. Get it from your druggist today. Your money back if it doesn't help you.

THE MATCH MARRER

(By D. J. Walsh.)

CONNY Glade, glancing up from her late roses, saw a discolorate little figure in blue moving in the adjoining yard and she on over, Hortense, and get my sunbursts," she called. Hortense Gray came slowly across the grass. She was a sweet-faced girl, usually becoming, today her a haggard intensity of expression too much just night at the party?" inquired Conny. "I go myself, Junior is feeling a little better, either."

"A little?" Conny nearly dropped her roses. "I thought you were never missed a dance?" Hortense pressed the roses to her face to hide her trembling. "Conny, at her left hand, started to go before she thought of Hortense! Your ring! Have you lost it?"

"No, I don't think I have," she said. "I think he doesn't care. And—no, I don't want to go. I'm not feeling well. We're engaged, aren't we?"

"Yes, I am," Conny said. "But I don't think I should go. I'm not feeling well. We're engaged, aren't we?"

"Yes, I am," Conny said. "But I don't think I should go. I'm not feeling well. We're engaged, aren't we?"

"Yes, I am," Conny said. "But I don't think I should go. I'm not feeling well. We're engaged, aren't we?"

"Yes, I am," Conny said. "But I don't think I should go. I'm not feeling well. We're engaged, aren't we?"

"Yes, I am," Conny said. "But I don't think I should go. I'm not feeling well. We're engaged, aren't we?"

"Yes, I am," Conny said. "But I don't think I should go. I'm not feeling well. We're engaged, aren't we?"

"Yes, I am," Conny said. "But I don't think I should go. I'm not feeling well. We're engaged, aren't we?"

"Yes, I am," Conny said. "But I don't think I should go. I'm not feeling well. We're engaged, aren't we?"

"Yes, I am," Conny said. "But I don't think I should go. I'm not feeling well. We're engaged, aren't we?"

She knew everything, her tongue was like a needle, she had influence, she was related to the Howes and the Howes and to Norman Wilcox; her opinions carried weight because she was extremely wealthy and some day Norman and Lillian would be her heirs, to say nothing of many more whom Conny could not name upon the instant.

"The old match marrer!" Conny breathed. "I see through her now, I wonder what I can do!"

Nothing it seemed, and yet Conny thought hard. She could not bear to see little Hortense's blue eyes full of that silent pain. Daring Hortense! Horrid old Miss Plopper! But she must inquire into the matter a little more first.

Hurrying to the telephone she invited Norman to supper, after which she told Jack that his friend was coming. Then she prepared to bait her little trap with a thick, juicy steak flavored with onions. None but those who knew that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach.

It was a perfect meal and both men praised the dainty work. Afterward while Jack did a bit of writing Conny sat with Norman on the porch in the moonlight and by every word she knew the story of the broken engagement out of her guest's mouth.

Norman was frank; he was hurt, his dignity was threatened. Hortense had gone riding with Leland Yates in that red sport car of his, and Leland Yates was anathema. He couldn't stand for it, his girl parading before the public eye with Leland Yates! No he hadn't given her a chance to explain, he had just told her they better call things off. And she had. No, he hadn't been unduly suspicious; of course he hadn't seen her with Leland, but he had heard about it, every detail; how they had stopped at the Willow Tree Inn for lunch. At that Norman snorted.

"I wonder," Conny inquired very softly. "If it could have been your Aunt Dora who saw Leland and Hortense together?"

"Yes, it was," exploded Norman. "She happened to be passing the Inn in Mrs. Bank's car when Hortense and that man came out to get into that spreader."

"But," purred Conny. "I wonder if she told you that Helen Warner was with them and that Leland has been trying for three years to get Helen to marry him and that she has only just now made up her mind that—she will, for the sake of reforming him."

"Not is that so?" shouted Norman. At that instant a sweet sound rose on the air. It was Hortense's violin. She was playing "Con Amore."

"You better go and ask Hortense. She'll tell you the truth," Conny said firmly. "If she never forgives you remember it is your fault because you didn't go to her like a man in the first place."

Norman went. And as he departed Conny flew to Miss Plopper's. She homed in upon the sphinxer with fire in her eyes.

"Norman's gone back to Hortense," she blazed. "Now I am going to tell you something."

The commotion that ensued was terribly exciting. But Conny, keyed up to do her best, had the match marrer beaten forty ways. She had gathered more than one scrap of information from Norman.

"Just because your signature sent the man you loved from you and embittered your whole life you're no business to want to make everybody else as miserable as yourself," was her final shot as she departed.

Then she ran home to cry on Jack's shoulder, leaving the match marrer to her own reflections.

Ambrosia Poor Second to Good Golden Corn

They could not touch us, those old Arcadians, in the matter of living well, nor, indeed, could the Olympians. Who would trade a heap of Golden Bantam sweet corn, for example, for a ton of the poets' ambrosia? Nothing doing. Nor in Longfellow's poetical description of the land, or in any other land, did human beings ever enjoy the quality and variety of Nature's food that Americans enjoy.

Nothing so like the spirit, since the ambition and satiation of the palate as the tender, timely roast of turkey, baked by sweet potatoes, rich red tomatoes, with brown fried chicken on the side, with gooseberry marmalade or currant jelly and hot biscuits. In fact, could he have lived and died anywhere in the Ohio or Miami valleys might have established a real reputation.

Nothing like it—except in the case of other blessed American ways.

And breakfast: The colors of the sun and the sea are the colors of the empanoules, and its delectable, teasing odor woos us even as the soft breath of a maiden sweetheart; and its flavor is born of the moonlight and the dew of heaven wedded with the sunlight and the sweeping rains.

Or maybe you will prefer watermelon. Green glory and flame-tipped congealed sweetness, that is what watermelon is; and it is not, never was and never will be criminal or wrong for kids to sneak you from a burdened patch in the flank of the moon, or any other old time if they can get away with it.

And all these blessings, known only in restricted, unimpeached measure to the dim Arcadians, are ours to have and to hold—as much of 'em as we can hold, which in a normal Christian adult is a plenty.

And with them we have the holy books, the hymns, the sanctified daisy, the rippling of the rivers and the calling of the birds. What more could mortal wish?—Chinaman Enquirer.

Writer Would Combine Harmony and Business

Wanderers in the Home park at Hampton court are said to have been startled by hearing the gangs of workmen employed in renovating its ditches and coops break into song. How far have we strayed from Merrie England, when even highwaymen and hangmen sang at their work! We may well pine for a return to the days of Pendergast and Macheath. Today errand boys whistle, grooms hiss through their teeth and taxi drivers groan, but only sailors, soldiers on the march and Welsh miners sing at their work. The rest of us confine our singing to the privacy of our baths. Behind locked doors we out-sing Chirpkins, but the presence of one fellow creature is enough to reduce us to dumbness.

It was not considered strange that the old-time milkmaid crooned at her task. Who expects the modern typist to follow her example? It is frequently complained that noise is the curse of civilization. Why not turn it into a blessing by making it harmonious? When every man sings no din of traffic will be heard. "Tis a sure sign work goes on merrily," said Isaac Bickerstaff, "when folk sing at it." It is high time we forsok the idea that work is a penance to be performed in silence in a black coat.

The edict proved unenforceable and soon was rescinded, because of the general disregard accorded it by nobles and commoners alike, and because tobacco had been adopted as a remedy for colds in the army, an excelled by any other remedy with which the Chinese then were acquainted.—Detroit News.

For Boyish Uplift The Catholic Boys Brigade of the United States is a nationwide union of individual branches guided by uniform and regional headquarters in doing constructive work among all types of boys by means of organized recreation and modern social work. Its organization is semi-military, but not militaristic. Its recreational and social meetings are not religious and are open to all boys without distinction as to creed or color. Although operated by Catholics, according to its own principles, it is not sectarian in its social work.—Washington Star.

Master of the Angels There was once a sculptor who lived so long ago that every one has forgotten his name but he would not mind for artists and critics have given him a new one; he is the Master of the Angels. He had a magic gift for turning dead stone into graceful faces and fluttering wings, and critics say his angels are different from all others.

The angels in the central and southern domes of the west portal of Chartres cathedral, which dates from the middle of the Twelfth century, are said to be his work.

Uselessness of Worry Worry will put more lines in a man's countenance than work will ever etch. It's the most useless mental exercise we engage in; the greatest wear on our finely attuned brains. And it's downright waste of human energy.—Grit.

Normality Tested "Name a number between five and twelve," said a psychologist to me recently, writes a correspondent. "Ten," I replied. "And a color?" he demanded. "Orange," I murmured. "Absolutely abnormal," he snapped. It appears that if one is perfectly normal the colors are "Seven" and "Blue." I found that out of 20 people, including clerks, advocates, journalists and hostesses, 16 of them gave normal responses—"Seven" and "Blue." The rest—"Orange" and "Blue." The reason for this is said to be that most people believe seven to be a lucky number and blue is a favorite color. Try it on your friends.

NORTH LOVELL

Mrs. John Woodbury, son John and little granddaughter Ruth from Haverhill, Mass., have been spending a few days at Perley McKee's. They are now in camp for a few weeks on the lake near Stoneham village.

Charles Meserve from Cambridge, Mass., also Ernest Merrill from Lowell, were at John Meserve's Saturday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hatch were there also.

Clinton Andrews is having much repairing done on his buildings here.

Mrs. Bessie Adams is helping care for her sister, Mrs. Hermon Bryant, who is seriously ill at her home in Albany.

Edie Pendexter and wife are at camp here for a few days. Their home is in Kezar Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Plummer have moved back to the village. They have been living in Clinton Andrews' house.

Mrs. Andrews and Mrs. Gray Parker are papering at Clinton Andrews'.

Mrs. Amos McKee is slowly recovering from her operation at St. Barnabas Hospital, Portland.

Friends and acquaintances of Walter Eastman at the Center, were very much saddened to hear of his serious accident, caused by a fall from a ladder in the barn, and his death shortly afterward.

Mrs. George Mills and three youngest children are visiting her parents in Bridgton.

CORRECTION

Last week's issue of the Citizen contained an error in the notice of the election of the Bethel Board of Health. The correct names are as follows:

We are pleased to make the following corrections: The Bethel Board of Health, consisting of Messrs. H. A. Strawn, J. H. Cummings, and J. H. Cummings, Jr., were elected on Friday evening, Nov. 1st, 1929. The Board of Health is composed of the following members: H. A. Strawn, J. H. Cummings, and J. H. Cummings, Jr.

Several schoolhouses have been in the hands of the Bethel Board of Health, and we also see that the school is in the hands of the Bethel Board of Health.

Oxford County United Parish

Embracing Albany, Stoneham, North Lovell and the Waterfalls. Pastoral Staff: Revs. W. L. Bull, B. Y. Wentworth, A. C. Townsend

The Annual Meeting of the Council is to be held in the Grange Hall, South Waterford, Thursday afternoon and evening of this week. There will be the annual business in the afternoon, a supper served by the ladies of South Waterford, and an address in the evening by Rev. Stanley Manning, State Superintendent of the Universalist Churches of Maine. It is expected that the Universalist Society of Waterford will be organized into a church. An interesting matter which has been under consideration for some time will be the adoption of a uniform covenant by all the churches within the United Parish. Such a covenant has been prepared by a committee, and will be for the churches for their consideration and their discussion at the meeting of the Council, and if approved, submitted to possible adoption.

The Church at North Waterford sends every year a missionary barrel to Brewster Normal School, a negro school in the South. This year's barrel is now being packed, and contributions are solicited. Send to Mrs. M. Cleave, North Waterford. Clothing, still usable, will be acceptable.

Fire protection for our villages and farm houses is being considered. North Waterford has a fireman's hall on Saturday evening, Nov. 9. East Stoneham is planning for one a little later.

Waterford is soon to take further steps toward organization and equipment.

There will be a Circle Supper at Albany on Thursday evening, and one at North Lovell on Friday evening.

The Five Night Church Training School, held at Waterford was a success. While the attendance was not large, the work done was thorough and interesting. Miss Harriet Louise Perry, of the Bethel Methodist Conference, had charge of the class in Primary Methods. Her work in both the school and in the Parish was highly appreciated.
